REVIEW OF NEW BOOKS.

—From J. B. Lippincott & Co. we have received "Old Songs and New," by Margaret J. Preston.

The poems in this handsome volume are classified as follows:—"From Hebrew Story," "From Greek Story," "Baldads and other Verses," "Sonnets," and "Devotional Pieces."

Of these the Greek subjects, some of the ballads, and some of the sonnets bear the most decided evidences of genuine poetical inspiration.

The religious poems are above the average of that kind of verse, but, as is apt to be the case, religious fervor has in numerous instances been mistaken for afflatus of the muses.

As thoughts on religious subjects the verses in question are open to no objection, but as poems they are not distinguished by any remarkable qualities.

The Greek subjects are very gracefully treated, although the version of the story of "Meleager," which is given under the title of "The Quenched Brand," is by no means as effective as the better-known one which Swinburne has worked up so finely in his "Atalanta in Calydon."

Many of the ballads, too, are poems of real merit, and the book altogether is one that is in very many respects superior to most of the volumes of verse that are annually issued from the press.

The following graceful "Apology" will give our readers a taste of the poetical quality of the volume:—

"What right hadst thou to chirp? I asked a bird, Whose slender bill I caught among the trees, Where thousands of full-throated harmonies Pulsated on the undulant air, and stirred The conscious forest-coverts, till I heard The leaves tinkle in their gladness; while the breeze Broadened its wings to waft the melodies Far up the wald, the twitterer, at my word, Paused (yet I missed no note). 'Within the vale Are mates of mine, he piped, 'for whom the lark Soars with his song too distant, yet who love My quiet cooling in the leafy dark: For them—not thee—I fill the nestled grove;— Broadened its wings to waft the melodies Far up the wald, the twitterer, at my word, Paused (yet I missed no note)."

J. B. Lippincott & Co. send us part 9 of "Universal Pronouncing Dictionary of Biography and Mythology," which brings the work down to the title "Cinq-Mars."

From the same house we have received "Days in North India," by Norman Macleod, D. D.

This very interesting book is made up of a series of papers which appeared in "Good Words," and it gives a very graphic description of some of the scenes of the great Sepoy mutiny, with reminiscences of the fearful days when the English women and children were made to suffer for the crimes that had characterized the British rule in India from the days of Clive.

The work is profusely illustrated with views, most of which are from photographs.

—From Claxton, Remsen & Haffelfinger we have received the following recent publications of Harper & Brothers:—"Willson's Intermediate Fifth Reader" is arranged with the view of introducing the elementary classes in our common schools to the study of rhetoric, criticism, eloquence, and oratory, as applied to both prose and poetry.

Willson's "Readers" have been before the public for a number of years, and the high esteem in which they are held by teachers in all parts of the country is a sufficient guarantee of the merits of the plan on which they are arranged.

"A Dangerous Guest," by the author of "Gilbert Ruggie," etc., is an entertaining novel, with a well-constructed plot, and some good character sketches.

—Porter & Coates send us the following works from the press of D. Appleton & Co.:—"The Young Duke" is one of Appleton's cheap reprints of Disraeli's early novels, and it is quite as well worthy of a perusal as any of the series.

"The Three Brothers," by Mrs. Oliphant, is an interesting story from the pen of a clever writer, whose merits, if not of a very positive cast, are such as commend her novels to the regards of a large number of intelligent readers.

—The "Technologist" for October, which has been sent us by Morris Frank, No. 619 Walnut street, has an excellent series of articles on practical and scientific subjects.

—The "American Sunday-School Worker" for September presents a variety of subjects which will interest those who are engaged in Sunday-school work.

—The Central News Company, No. 505 Chesnut street, send us the latest numbers of "Punch and Fun."

—From Turner & Co. we have received "Every Saturday," "Appleton's Journal," and "Our Boys and Girls."
